No end in sight to water ban

BY MARK LAYCOCK AND PAUL FREY
Didsbury Review

Using tap water for outdoor watering is now prohibited, bulk water sales are restricted, and industrial businesses within Didsbury's limits are being urged to limit non-essential water use after a ban went into effect last week.

The Mountain View Regional Water Services Commission implemented the ban in Didsbury on August 18 in response to several days of soaring temperatures that resulted in the water reservoir operating at 50 per cent capacity or less.

Other communities under the ban include Carstairs, Olds, Bowden and Crossfield.

Innisfail is under a warning, but because the town is on a different line than other communities a ban hasn't been implemented.

"We have to maintain enough water to service critical things such as the fire departments and hospitals," said Bob Davidson, chairman of the water services commission.

Davidson said he felt confident that banning outside watering would help return capacity levels back to normal.

The ban stipulates that tap water cannot be used for outdoor watering, bulk water sales are restricted, and industrial businesses are urged to limit their consumption and halt non-essential water use until further notice.

"We haven't shut down car washes, but at this point we're saying 'be a little more careful about what you're allowing,'" said Davidson.

He explained that the rapid influx of residents to the county in the past few years, coupled with limited means to transport water from the Anthony Henday Water Treatment Plant in Innisfail to southern communities has resulted in higher demand than what can be transported because southern flowing pipes can only carry so much water at one time.

"The reason it was imposed was the line to the south... from the (Anthony Henday Water Treatment) plant down through to Crossfield cannot carry the amount of water it needs to keep the reservoir system filled, so it had dropped past the (critical) point," he said.

The reservoir was at a low of 42 per cent capacity on August 12, but it needs to rise to a minimum of 85 per cent before restrictions are lifted.

Restrictions have been imposed so there's enough water for critical activities such as firefighting. Drinking water supplies have not been affected.

"You have to have at least some volume of the reservoir's capacity available for emergency and we've reached a critical point. Until such time as the line system can refill the reservoirs the water restrictions (will remain)," Davidson said.

Rainfall last week in Olds and Didsbury did help some, but Davidson said a lot more needs to fall before the reservoir is filled to capacity.

As long as it stays cool and consumption remains lower, the level should slowly rise. The stress to the system of hot, dry weather as occurred on the weekend of August 16 and 17 is the worst-case scenario.

"That last weekend it was so hot and everybody (was) out and doing their stuff outside probably really dropped the level in a hurry," Davidson said.

Courthouse security gets upgrade

BY ANDREA MACLEAN
Didsbury Review

The Didsbury courthouse can expect a security upgrade in upcoming weeks as part of the Alberta government's perimeter security program.

Portable security equipment (such as hand-held metal detectors) will be brought into Didsbury as needed said Michelle Davio, communications officer for Solicitor General and Public Security.

"Since perimeter security was introduced more than two years ago, it has proven very successful," said Fred Lindsay, Solicitor General and Minister of Public Security. "Our sheriffs have stopped more than 16,000 items such as knives, box cutters, brass knuckles, bear spray and a gun from getting into our courthouses. We're providing a safer, more secure environment for both the public who access courthouses in Alberta and the people who work there."

Perimeter security is part of the province's three-year comprehensive court security plan. The plan's first phase was introduced in September 2005 when sheriffs took over courtroom and prisoner transfer duties from the RCMP. The move allows RCMP officers to concentrate on the frontline policing duties in the community.

"Sheriffs got inmates to the door and then RCMP took over. This way sheriffs look after them all the way through," said Davio.

Nine additional sheriffs and one sergeant have been hired in southern Alberta to accommodate the move.

"Didsbury is a circuit court so they (sheriffs) will go there as needed."

According to Davio, the changes will not likely affect people attending court in Didsbury on an average day.

"The same jobs are getting done, just by different people. If it's a high profile case, they may have to get scanned. It would slow them down a little bit. But I don't think people will notice a huge difference."

Didsbury, Okotoks, Airdrie and Cochrane are among the last locations in the province to receive the enhanced courthouse security measures. They will be implemented in September.

Larger communities have received walk-through scanners, hand-held metal detectors, and X-ray inspection systems for baggage scanning as part of the perimeter security program.

Playground vandalism taxes limited preschool coffers

BY ANDREA MACLEAN
Didsbury Review

Police continue to look for vandals who destroyed the playground at the Didsbury Preschool Society recently.

Plastic play structures were flipped and a plastic slide was torn from the permanent wooden playground August 15 around 1 a.m.

The damage means that the preschool will have to get a whole new playground said Lee-Anne Akister, a parent involved in the school and a former treasurer of the Didsbury Preschool Society Board.

"Because of provincial regulations we can't just repair the wooden structure. Code is that you have to get rid of it because treated wood isn't acceptable for playgrounds anymore. As long as it's well maintained, you can keep it, but the minute you need to fix it, you have to get rid of it."

The Didsbury Preschool Society that works with about 50 students, is a non-profit organization that gets a lot of its money from fundraising.

"We were fundraising in order to make an addition (to the school) so that we can have some more students as our classes are full and we have long waiting lists," said Akister.

But, according to Akister, the society recently discovered that the building must be torn down and rebuilt from scratch due to the poor condition of the roof and foundation.

"So that's where our concentration is, to fundraise not only to keep our school going - because we are a non-profit society - but to build a bigger school for our students," Akister said. "Now we have this playground to deal with. It's like kicking us when we are down already."

Exploiting rodeo animals for fun, money not acceptable

Rodeo?

Let's call it what it really is, shall we? Exploiting a fellow sentient being for money and entertainment!

I'm not saying 'ban the rodeo/stampede.' What I am saying is that many, not all, rodeo 'events' are cruel and unnecessary.

What is the need for strapping yourself to a horse, digging and dragging metal spurs into the animal's sides, angering the horse to the point it's thrashing and bucking to get you off. What is the need for hopping on the back of a bull, cinching a strap around the animal's groin, upsetting the animal so much it does everything in its power to get you off his back?

What is the need for terrifying a calf by throwing a rope around its neck, ripping it off the ground, slamming the calf to the ground and tying its legs together? Granted calf roping is sometimes needed on a working ranch, I'll give you that much.

What is the need for 'mutton-busting'? What is the need for the chuckwagon racing?

Truthfully, there is no need for these 'events.' Let's be honest shall we, the only reason they exist is for money, entertainment and let's not forget the almighty ego.

I've heard countless (what I call) excuses for the inhumane goings-on at rodeos: the horses have such thick skin they don't feel the spurs digging into their sides, the calf's neck is so strong that roping doesn't faze it, the animals love performing, it's just a horse/bull/calf/ewe, it's only for a few seconds so what's the big deal? Shall I go on?

One needs to understand these are not predatory animals, they are prey animals. When faced with what they perceive to be a threat they naturally react by running, thrashing, bucking, and basically doing everything they can to escape. In their minds, they are fighting for their lives. These animals are not there by choice, they do not like having a predator on their back, they do not like performing for you.

Think about it, how would you like to be chased by something you perceive to be a threat, having a rope thrown around your neck ripping you off your feet, slamming you to the ground and tying your legs up leaving you entirely helpless? How would you like to have a lion on your back digging its claws into you, all the while being surrounded by screaming creatures making the event even more stressful?

The next time you're at a rodeo being entertained by a terrified animal I challenge you to take a single moment out of your life to truly look into the animal's eyes, put yourself in the animal's place and be fully conscious of what is really going on in front of you. If you find yourself content to sit and watch the animal suffer, so be it.

If you find yourself disgusted, standing up and leaving, the animal thanks you with all its being.

AS LAY-OFFS CONTINUE, LABOUR DAY'S RELEVANCE REVIVES...

Letter to the editor Fluoride does not belong in our water

There is obvious controversy over water fluoridation and for very good reason. Fluoride is a compound of Fluorine which is a deadly poison, second only to arsenic. Fluorine is a known carcinogen.

The article on fluoridation of water from the August 12, 2008 edition states that "an adult male would need to consume 15,000 litres of water that is fluoridated at optimum levels continuously in one sitting to get an acute toxic (lethal) dose of fluoride." So what about chronic effects on the body? No one knows how the body rids itself of fluoride or even if it can. So what happens over time as fluoride accumulates in our body tissues?

As reported in the Globe and Mail article of November 23, 2007, "Recent research is suggesting that fluoride may be connected to a number of serious conditions, including the development in teenage boys of osteosarcoma, the rare bone cancer that killed Canadian icon Terry Fox, reduced intelligence levels in children, and impaired thyroid function."

There are so many illnesses and cancers these days that to me it seems common sense that they have to be related to something we are doing to our bodies, something we are putting in it. "Current science", as quoted so many times in the August 12 article, certainly doesn't have the answers for us.

In addition, as reported in the Globe and Mail article of November 23, 2007 "A review is even more pressing, in the view of critics, because scientists now believe that the main protective action from fluoride does not come from ingesting the chemical, with the teeth absorbing it from inside the body, but from direct absorption through topical application to teeth."

Water has been here for billions of years in its perfect, pure form. Clean, pure water is vital to our health. Keep the chemicals out. If you want excess fluoride in your water, I say put it in your own personal source.

Commentary When it's OK to talk to strangers

Gwen Randall-Young

When we were young, many of us were taught not to talk to strangers. This is good advice for children. The problem is, in our culture, for many, this admonition remained as a way of life.

We stand in lines, in the bank, the grocery store or the coffee place, staring blankly off into the distance, careful not to make eye contact with any of the "strangers" standing there with us.

The fact is, these "strangers" are members of our community, with the same stresses, demands and time pressures as the rest of us. Occasionally there is one who is outgoing, cheerful, perhaps with a sense of humour—who speaks to the line in general, snapping us all out of our "don't-talk-to-strangers" trance.

Suddenly everyone relaxes, smiles, and perhaps makes a comment to the one next to him or her. For that moment, we are all connected. It feels warm and good. Our hearts open, just a little. This is good for our stress levels, and even for our immune systems.

Perhaps, now that we are grown up, we should toss the old rule, and begin talking to strangers (using common sense, of course.) It is a kindness, and an acknowledgement that there is another human being in our presence. Even if we have never met, a fellow human is deserving of a smile and a nod, at the very least.

How can we help you?

Sculpting their way to health and success

BY ANDREW WILD
Didsbury Review

Commitment.

That single word is the best descriptor for Brad and Heather Lausen and their pursuit of the body perfect.

The Didsbury couple is fully immersed in the sport of bodybuilding and despite the sacrifices and work it takes wouldn't have it any other way.

For the last 12 years the two have been fully dedicated to the daily routine of gym workouts, meticulous diet planning and sculpting their bodies. In more recent times they've taken their passion to new highs as both stepped into the competitive bodybuilding arena; Brad for the last seven years and Heather just this year.

"I think in the back of my head I always wanted to do it, and I also wanted to see and take part in what Brad does," explained Heather.

And what an introduction to the competitive side of the ledger. At the Southern Alberta Bodybuilding Championships in Red Deer this past June, the first-time competitor took top spot in the women's middleweight and masters division and also secured the women's overall title.

It brought Heather full circle as she initially started out like so many that head into the gym and start lifting weights.

"I think you just start going to the gym for health reasons ... and then you get to know the community like in other sports and you just kind of end up there," she suggested.

It helps having a life partner that is also just as committed to the sport, if not more so.

As someone who always had an appreciation for the sport and always dabbled in it, Brad came to the conclusion that he'd have to make a lifelong commitment if he wanted to take that next step and fulfill a personal goal.

"When I was about 29 or 30 I decided that if I was going to do anything with it, you know 'live the dream', that I'd better grab the bull by the horns right then ... and that's what I did," he explained.

A veteran competitor in the men's middleweight and masters divisions, Brad is looking forward to the 2009 provincial and national competitions along with Heather.

Because the regimen of muscle development and muscle sculpting can be quite demanding, the pair is limiting the number of competitions they enter. That ensures the best results in terms of producing the type of mass and definition that judges are looking for.

And the most important element in their training schedule is their diet.

"So basically, it's all about what you eat," Brad explained. "People think there's massive amounts of drugs in bodybuilding ... but most of it's genetics. You can take all the drugs in the world but it's all about the food."

Their food intake varies depending on what part of their training stage they're in. During the non-competitive part of the calendar, they'll eat literally thousands of calories. Heather is currently on an eating plan that has her near 3,000 calories per day and Brad is hoping to be up around 8,000.

They admit it sounds like a tremendous amount of food to pack away, but coupled with a daily lifting schedule that lasts anywhere from half an hour to an hour per body part, it provides a base from which they can sculpt into the type of form commonly seen at competition.

"It's hard to eat that much food," Brad laughed. "But it's extremely good food ... it has everything you need and believe it or not eating all that food, a person doesn't get fat, you get big and grow muscle."

In order to ensure their diet is healthy yet effective, the couple enlist the advice of another husband and wife team.

Brian and Donna Logue of Edmonton are legends in the sport in Alberta. Not only are they responsible for having organized the Alberta Bodybuilding Association that the Lausens belong to, but also they serve as personal trainers to the Didsbury couple along with a laundry list of high level athletes.

Heather said that in addition to providing great dietary advice, having a qualified and experienced trainer allows a second set of eyes to view one's progress.

"You don't see yourself the way other people do ... you can screw yourself up because you can be your own worst critic," she explained. "In that way they're great."

Heather said there are misconceptions still attached to women in the sport, particularly when it comes to the diet and ingesting the high number of calories required to sustain one's self in the sport.

"That's a huge stigma for women," Heather said. "If you're active and eating good food an average woman should be eating about 2,600 to 2,800 calories per day ... your body ends up using it right."

The commitment and discipline really comes when it's time to pare down for a competition. Generally, in order to sculpt properly and get the desired effect, the number of calories and level of training intensity are both reduced.

For Heather, that meant a 26 week period before the Southern Alberta where she reduced her daily calorie intake to approximately 1,800 and began shaping the body that ultimately won the overall title.

Brad said it's just the only way to compete at a high level and stay natural.

"There's no way around it," he deadpanned.

Heather said the dieting period was difficult simply because of how long it was, a timeframe that tends to be even more extended for the majority of female competitors compared to their male counterparts.

However, she said it is a difficult stage to stay at for too long.

"Genetically you can't unless you're dabbling in other stuff," Heather summarized, adding she was happy to be finished the competition so she could begin eating a little more liberally again.

However, the goals of next year's competitions are already starting to take shape. While Heather is just looking to do the best she can at both provincials and nationals, Brad has his eye on one of the ultimate goals in the sport.

"That's what I want, I want that pro card," he said. "That would be the highlight of my bodybuilding career; any bodybuilder's career. A pro card is like the Olympics or the Stanley Cup of bodybuilding."

"Once you're a pro that's as elite as it gets," Brad added.

While it seems like a lofty goal, the quality of competition in Alberta already puts anyone who's involved in the sport competitively in an advantageous position.

The province is considered one of the hotbeds of the sport, right up there with the Okanagan and other areas associated with bodybuilding.

"Nowhere in the world, except maybe California, will you find bodybuilders of this quality," said Brad.

And even though it's a small community of athletes, it's a fairly tight knit group. Heather said there are several quality current and former bodybuilders in the Didsbury and Okanagan region, they're just not well known.

"There's actually lots of people that are doing it (locally), it's just kind of a quiet sport," she explained.

In bodybuilding terms both are in the prime of their careers. Heather and Brad both qualify to compete in the masters division (ages 35-plus) but in bodybuilding that's not when athletes begin to break down or consider retirement.

Many of the overall champions in competitions all over the world come from the 35 to 50 age group, according to Brad.

"People who do this don't drink, don't party; you really have to live the life," he explained. "It's a sport for life and it's a sport for anybody. You can do it at any age."

Heather believes it's simply a matter of people being more health conscious as they age and understanding the balance needed to excel.

"I think as we get older we start looking at our health differently and we start respecting it," she said.

That respect is something they hope to pass on to people in the future. Eventually the pair hope to begin training people to undertake healthy weight loss programs, meaning combining activity with a healthy diet.

Dragons football team set for encore

Team ready to face new foe

BY ANDREW WILD
Didsbury Review

It will be take two for the Didsbury Dragons community football team, and hopes are it will be as successful as the inaugural season.

However, one thing organizers of the Mountain View Football League can boast already is 50 per cent growth over the first season.

The Sundre Capital Pressure Bison have joined the fold this season stretching the membership of the league to three members, joining the Dragons and the Carstairs Tigers.

According to Mark Lefebvre, head coach of the Dragons, the league almost doubled in size with both Beiseker and Caroline making inquiries about joining this year, with the latter committing for 2009.

"I wish we'd have had four but that didn't work out – but four next year for sure," explained Lefebvre. "Sundre already had a practice and a scrimmage with (Caroline) this year, so we've got a good relationship with them so it should be up to four teams next year."

What makes the Mountain View league distinct is it's played with nine players on the field instead of the usual 12 under Canadian rules. Other than the absence of the two guards on the offensive line and one of the backs, the nine-man code plays with the identical rules and field size that the Alberta high schools utilize.

"Nine-man football is kind of a take on an American concept – they have eight-man leagues," said Lefebvre. "It's for smaller centres, so because they've got 11 they go down to eight and because we've got 12-man in Canadian football, we go down to nine."

He said Football Alberta has been supportive of the concept and encouraging the league's growth and development, particularly in the smaller centres. Last year was the first foray into nine-man football anywhere in Alberta.

And while early registration in Didsbury is down slightly from last year, with 19 on board so far compared to 25 last season, Lefebvre says they expect to see the numbers creep up towards the 2007 total as potential players return from holidays.

"It seems as though just about every practice we're picking up another player," he said. While the majority of the players are from Didsbury, they do have a few players from outside the area, something they can do with a community team versus a school team where the players have to come from the student body.

Lefebvre said the earlier start to the season is likely contributing to the lower enrolment compared to last year. Already the other two teams have played a league game and on Wednesday, the Dragons get into their first competitive game with a trip to Carstairs.

Kickoff is 6 p.m. at Hugh Sutherland School and while the local squad is returning several players on offence, the entire defensive unit will be a different story with several players gone from last year's team that dominated their Hwy. 2A rivals all season.

"I think we should be strong again. Our offence, except for the quarterback, is intact so that should give us a bit of an advantage," Lefebvre said.

The Dragons will play their four home games at the Ross Ford Elementary soccer field. Next year they have eyes on playing at the high school once the field is completed and up to standard for football.

"Right now we've got to make do with the biggest field we can find," offered Lefebvre.

JED Oil trying to find financial footing

Locally-based company files for credit protection

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN
Didsbury Review

A local oil and natural gas company's debt appears to have it over a barrel, at least for now.

On Aug. 13, Didsbury-based JED Oil Inc. applied creditor protection – similar to Chapter 11 in the United States – under the federal Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act (CCAA).

The move comes as the company, which engages in the exploration, development, and production of natural gas and crude oil in Canada and the United States, was unable to repay $40 million in notes that became due in February, and was in danger of being placed in receivership.

"Ever since we knew that we wouldn't have the money on Feb. 1, (creditor protection) has been a possibility, but one that we wanted to avoid," explains Marcia Johnston, vice-president of Legal and Corporate Affairs, adding that the filing is not equivalent to declaring bankruptcy.

"Our assets exceed our liabilities by a quite a bit, we just have a cash flow problem because we have these notes that we have been unable to redeem," says Johnston.

This protection – which expires 30 days from filing, but can be extended – will give the struggling company,

Carla Victor/Didsbury Review
James Rundell, president of JED Oil based in Didsbury.

which declared a net loss of $5.2 million US for the first half of 2008, an opportunity to find its financial footing.

"Everything we owed through Aug. 12 is essentially frozen in the sense that creditors can't seek remedies against us like realizing on their security or filing lawsuits," indicates Johnston, adding that this will provide breathing space for the company to take care of its back bills.

It will also level the playing field by assigning all of the organization's creditors equal repayment priority, she adds.

"As it was, when people had services that we absolutely needed, they could insist we make payments on the past due part or they wouldn't keep working for us."

In the meantime, the company is permitted to continue its normal day-to-day-operations. Johnston is optimistic that the company will be able to recover.

"It's business as usual," she says. "There's a definite possibility, if not probability, that we'll keep operating."

JED Oil is publicly traded on the American Stock Exchange (AMEX) under the ticker symbol JDO. In the fall of 2006, it underwent a management restructuring that saw the departure of the company's president and chief financial officer and the arrival of Tom Jacobsen as CEO.

The company plans to issue an update on its situation on or before Sept. 15.

Brian Joseph Brilz

June 20, 1964 - August 11, 2008

Brian passed away peacefully on August 11, 2008 at Red Deer Alberta at the age of 44 years. Brian was born June 20, 1964 in Didsbury to Edith and Inno Brilz. He was the youngest of seven children. Over the last 44 years Brian has been an important part of our lives. Born with special needs, Brian's first few years required enormous amount of loving care and attention.

Brian was able to attend special classes at Ross Ford in Didsbury until the Horizon School opened in Olds where he graduated from in 1982. After graduation Brian spent a short time at VRRI in Calgary. When his mother died in 1983 he moved to the Didsbury area for a short time before moving first to Wetaskawin and eventually settling in Red Deer.

Brian touched the lives of everyone he met and wasn't afraid to ask any questions of anyone. The family farm was one of his favourite places to visit and he could remember every detail about all his favourite pieces of equipment. Brian liked to drive the garden tractor his Mom bought him and at one time he had a small lawn cutting business. He had a life long love of animals, especially the farm dogs which he loved to shower with treats at Christmas. Brian also really enjoyed the time he spent in the Handicapped Riding program.

Brian always enjoyed family gatherings and any social event, especially when food or treats were available. He really looked forward to Christmas and birthdays and vacations with his family. We are all going to miss his birthday list given shortly after Christmas and his Christmas list given shortly after his birthday.

Brian was a true kid at heart, looking at the world through child's eyes. He spent many hours working on his train set and fixing toy equipment. He always looked forward to adding something new to his train set.

Brian went on numerous trips and vacations. Disneyland, Universal Studios, Disney World and Clear Lake were some of his favourite destinations. He also looked forward to going to the Calgary Zoo, Heritage Park and Irricana. Flying out to Vancouver was a highlight for him as well. He enjoyed anytime he could visit any of his family wherever they were. Fall was one of his favourite seasons. He was happiest when he could ride in the combine or grain truck and share meals in the field. Brian enjoyed going to church and went to various denominations over the years depending upon who would take him. Brian was predeceased by his parents Inno and Edith Brilz and a niece. Leaving to mourn are his brothers & sisters: Betty (Austin), Don (Linda), Pat (Sandy), Wayne (Anna), Beverly & Ian (Sharon) & numerous nieces & nephews.

Brian enjoyed life to the best of his ability and we will always remember him for his ability to see things at their simplest and accept things for who and what they were. Funeral services were held at Knox United Church, Didsbury on Friday August 15, 2008 at 2:00 p.m., with viewing Thursday 7:00 - 9:00 p.m., at Mountain View Funeral Chapel, Didsbury. Condolences for the family may be forwarded from www.mem.com. Arrangements entrusted to Mountain View Funeral Chapels, Olds. Phone 556-3223, Proudly serving our community for over 45 years.

Special years will not return

When we were all together

But with the love within our hearts

You'll be with us forever.

Sadly missed by the

In loving memory of Neil Rigsby
Who passed away August 25, 2005

To my dear husband and best friend

The moment that you died

My heart split in two

The one side was filled with memories

The other died with you

I often lie awake at night When the world is fast asleep

And take a walk down memory lane

With tears upon my cheek

You left me precious memories

Your love is still my guide

And though I cannot see you

You are always by my side

For those of you who still have their husbands

Treat them with tender loving care

You never know the emptiness

As when you turn and he's not there

Lovingly remembered and forever missed

Isabelle Rigsby

In loving memory of Neil Rigsby
Who passed away August 25, 2005

August comes with great regret

A month that we will never forget

We hold our tears when we speak your name

But the ache in our hearts remains the same

May the winds of love blow gently

And whisper so you can hear

That we still love and miss you

And wish that you were here
